Japan Opens Seeming 'Peace Offensive' And Reports New Alarms; Forde Says In Australia War Turns in Allied Favor

British Are To Link 3 War Forces

Army, Navy, Air Arm Will Be Under One Operations Staff, Eden Reports

Dutch Tell Fears

Dutch Refugees Report Germans Fear Anglo Invasion

(By The Associated Press)

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the British House of Commons in London today that Prime Minister Winston Churchill has approved a plan to organize a combined operations staff, linking Britain's army, navy and air force into a single gigantic combat team.

The move to coordinate the three British fighting services—perhaps as a prelude to an allied invasion of Nazi-dominated Europe—closely followed conferences by Gen. George C. Marshall, U. S. army chief of staff, and Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's representative, with British military and political leaders.

Dutch quarters in London said German Field Marshal Gerd von Runstedt was building up a Nazi bicycle army in northern France and Belgium in defense against new British Commando raids and a possible allied invasion attempt.

Dutchmen escaping from Holland said the Germans were taking the entire production of bicycle factories in the low countries and Denmark and reported mounting anxiety among Nazi occupation troops over the prospect of a British invasion.

Dutch refugees said German authorities had forbidden soldiers to sing the song so popular a year ago—"We Are Sailing Against England."

London observers said they expected to see the red, white and blue insignia of U. S. army bombers in the sky any day now, and the London Daily Sketch declared:

"Soon at airdromes all over Britain there will be gathered the force of planes that will make this country the world's greatest air base . . . hundreds of United States aircraft—giant bombers, medium bombers and dive bombers — flown by American air crews."

Other developments:

Sea warfare—A Berlin radio broadcast asserted that more than 2,000,000 tons of shipping had been sunk by Axis submarines operating off the American Atlantic and Pacific coasts in the last three months. (Note: This figure is far in excess of losses disclosed by the United States.)

The broadcast said that 1,772,000 tons of British and American ships had been sunk off the Atlantic seaboard between January 15 and April 14, and that Japanese underseas raiders in the same period had sunk 22 ships off the Pacific coast.

Vichy crisis—Admiral Jean Darlan, commander of all France's armed forces, told his fighting men that "you can rely on me as I rely on you to proceed further along the path of honor and to defend the empire."

With this enigmatic expression, Darlan left open the all-important question of how far the "path of honor" would lead toward active military aid to Germany, now that the new pro-Nazi premier, Pierre Laval, has pledged the conquered republic to solidarity with the Reich.

Russian campaign—Soviet parachute troops, described as strong enough to free German-occupied villages and "hold them against all counter-attacks," were reported landing behind Nazi lines, while the Red army also reported gains on the Moscow and Leningrad fronts.

Soviet dispatches said Russian troops in the Leningrad sector had captured 17 Nazi strongholds in throwing back the German 217th division.

A Red army communique declared that 1,500 German planes had been destroyed by Russian fliers and anti-aircraft batteries from March 1 to April 14, and other Soviet accounts said Red air squadrons had shot down 15 German planes in a battle over the Arctic port of Murmansk.

On the central front, where the Russians have ben slowly closing a giant pincers around the German "escape corridor" from Moscow, the Soviet radio reported the capture of an important point of resistance, with 1,300 Nazis killed in 48 hours of heavy fighting.

Advices reaching London yesterday said the Russians were within artillery range of Smolensk, key German base 230 miles west of Moscow.

Hitler's field headquarters reported that German troops on the central front had "annihilated" a trapped Russian force, and said the Vienna 34th infantry division had beaten off numerically superior Red army units "after weeks of heavy fighting."

North African front—British headquarters announced that clearing weather brought a resumption of "normal patrol activities."

Hits Jap Sub

The Navy announced that an American submarine commanded by Lt. Comdr. Elton W. Grenfell of Radburn, N. J., made a surprise attack on a Jap submarine in the western Pacific and had damaged it with torpedo fire. Grenfell was awarded a Navy cross.

Navy Takes Over Brewsters; Planes Were Not Finished

Two Plants on Long Island and Two Others Are Now Being Managed by Government

New York, April 21 (AP)—The United States navy took over the plants of the Brewster Aeronautical Company yesterday because "no finished planes were being produced," said Captain George C. Westervelt, U. S. navy, retired, as he assumed active command over production.

The plants located in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania have been running at only 40 per cent of capacity in parts production, he said, with no finished product coming off the assembly lines.

"The plants have been taken over," said Westervelt, "because the President of the United States said the production was not satisfactory and he wanted steps taken to increase that production."

The company has two plants at Long Island City and two additional plants at Newark, N. J., and Johnsville, Pa., and has contracts totalling millions of dollars for the production of fighters, dive bombers and training planes. President Roosevelt yesterday directed the navy to operate the plants and the navy took formal control today.

There has been no hint of sabotage or slowdown because of enemy alien activity in the plant, Captain Westervelt said, nor was there any hint of untoward union activity to cause production slowdown.

"Nowhere in my instructions or in the conversation regarding the instructions at the navy department or elsewhere has there been made to me the slightest intimation that any such situation or influence exists," Westervelt said.

"I have no reason to believe that the taking over of this plant was influenced by any consideration of alien activity."

There will be no change in the union status at the various plants, Captain Westervelt said, and added that so far as he was concerned there has been no reference whatsoever to unsatisfactory union labor relations in any degree.

G.O.P. Votes State Civil Jobs Probe

Assembly Passes Bill 78 to 61 Over Bitter Democratic Battle at Albany

Proposal Is Made

Wicks Would Provide Another Million for State Guard

Albany, N. Y., April 21 (AP)—The Republican-controlled assembly, over solid and bitter Democratic opposition, voted today for a $25,000 legislative investigation into "all phases" of the state's Democratic-administered civil service.

The inquiry, approved 78 to 61, would turn scrutiny into municipal as well as state civil service administration activities. The proposal went to the senate immediately for expected concurrence.

While Republicans, acknowledged the investigation represented a party quest for gubernatorial campaign ammunition, Democrats shouted accusations the majority lawmakers were "desperately fishing" for issues.

"This is purely partisan politics and nothing else," maintained Assemblyman Daniel Flynn, New York city Democrat.

"If everything is as beautiful as you insist," retorted Republican Assembly Majority Leader Irving M. Ickes, "then I think you would want us to look civil service over."

The majority legislators' efforts in behalf of the fall elections also brought these developments within four days of final adjournment:

Assembly adoption by party vote of a senate-approved measure for a $50,000 investigation into expenditures of every unit of state government—labeled "a fishing expedition" by objecting Democrats.

Submission of Republican bills to advance pre-election political activities five weeks, and create a $100,000 "state war ballot commission" which would try to assure voting privileges of about 400,000 New Yorkers in the armed services.

Renewal of the Republican "economy in government" slogan with submission by the legislature's G.O.P. financial authorities of a $300,431 supplemental budget, lowest in more than a decade.

The investigation into civil service was proposed in a resolution sponsored by Assemblyman Fred Hollowell, Yates Republican. It requests "a thorough, complete and careful" examination into the administration and operation of civil service laws.

Wicks' Proposal

Measures to provide State Guard defense against "hostile air attacks" and financial aid to citizens suffering damage from enemy "attack or sabotage" confronted New York Legislators today.

Introduced with Governor Lehman's approval and under Republican sponsorship, the State Guard bill would expand New York's forces "to provide supplemental military defense of those areas where attack might come."

Guardsmen would be trained to aid U. S. Army forces in repelling air or coastal attacks.

An additional $1,000,000 appropriation for the State Guard is proposed by Senator Arthur H. Wicks and Assemblyman Abbot Low Moffat, Republican chairman of the two fiscal committees. The 1942-43 budget already includes an equal amount.

State residents in financial need resulting from enemy action would receive immediate "war emergency aid" from state home relief

This was the first joint victory of British and Chinese arms in Burma. Other Chinese forces were forced to withdraw in the vicinity of Ela (2) from Myohla.

Mrs. Leahy Dies In Vichy; Wife Of U.S. Ambassador

Mrs. Leahy Underwent Major Operation Last Week; Hulls Send Condolence

Vichy, Unoccupied France, April 21 (AP)—Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of the United States ambassador to France, died here today. She underwent a major operation last week.

Mrs. Leahy, the former Louise Tennent Harrington, had been in ill health for several years. Late in 1940, she traveled from Vichy to Lisbon to spend several weeks in Portugal at the time the couple's only son, William H. Leahy, an officer in the United States Navy, was there.

She and Admiral Leahy were married on February 3, 1904.

When the ambassador was recalled to Washington for "consultation," during the formation of new government of Pierre Laval last week, the United States embassy in Vichy said Admiral Leahy's departure would have to be postponed several weeks because of Mrs. Leahy's condition. She was then in a hospital.

In Washington, Secretary of State Hull announced that he had sent the following message of condolence to Ambassador Leahy:

"Mrs. Hull and I were greatly distressed and pained by the sad news which has just reached up. We are grieving with you in the great loss which you have suffered in serving your country and send you our very deepest sympathy."

Special Committee Considers Ways of Salvaging Vessel

Cost Might Run Into Huge Sum of $10,000,000, Unofficial Opinion Suggests

Washington, April 21 (AP)—A special committee of expert ship builders and naval architects set out today to try to determine whether the seared and flooded $60,000,000 liner Normandie can be salvaged for war duty.

Appointment of the committee by Navy Secretary Knox was announced last night coincident with release of the findings of a departmental court of inquiry which said "gross carelessness" was responsible for the fire that swept the big liner at her New York city pier last February.

The carelessness, plus "utter violation of rules of common sense" was attributed in the report to employes of the Robins Drydock and Repair Company, Inc., contractors engaged to convert the 83,000 ton vessel, once the pride of the French merchant marine, into a United States troop transport.

No evidence of sabotage was found.

Provided the committee headed by J. Barslow Smull of New York can offer a solution to the engineering problems involved, it was estimated unofficially that the cost of salvaging the ship should run around $10,000,000.

The Normandie, which gaily ferried world notables across the Atlantic in other years, was tied up in New York when the war started. She was seized by the United States last December 12 and renamed the U.S.S. Lafayette.

Approximately $2,000,000 worth of luxurious decorations and furnishings, the work of a number of leading French artists and artisans, were removed and stored when the job of converting her into a trop transport was begun.

The fire started when life preservers stored in the main lounge were ignited by a blow torch in the hands of a workman, the navy report said, and spread through the 1,160 bales of preservers like a "grass fire."

Flooded with water from firemen's hose, the ship rolled over on her side and has lain there since.

Other members of the committee to study salvage possibilities are:

Rear Admiral H. S. Howard, Bureau of Ships, Navy Department; H. G. Smith, president National Council of American Shipbuilders; A. V. Moore, president Moore McCormack Lines, Inc., N. Y.; Rear Admiral H. L. Vickery, U. S. Maritime Commission; Rear Admiral George H. Rock, retired; Professor H. L. Seward, Yale University; Commander W. A. Sullivan, of the Bureau of Ships, and W. A. Gibbs, New York city.

Will Hold Session

London, April 21 (AP)—The House of Commons will hold a secret session this week to debate the war situation, it was announced officially today.

Taft Considers G. O. P. Post-War Statement Mistake for Committee

Willkie Says 1942 Candidates Should Uphold Principles Backed by Party Committee; Resolution Does Not Contain 'Isolationism'

Chicago, April 21 (AP).—The Republican National Committee feels the United States is obliged to help bring about "an understanding, comity and cooperation" among nations of the postwar world, a stand Wendell L. Willkie characterized as an "abandonment of isolationism."

Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, however, said he thought it "a great mistake" for the committee to have expressed any policy on post-war action as it did last night at its first meeting since the nation went to war.

Other leaders, including Joseph W. Martin, Jr., committee chairman, and Clarence Budington Kelland, committee executive director, expressed approval of the committee's work which included a demand for relentless prosecution of an offensive war.

Willkie, 1940 presidential nominee, said Republicans should see to it that in the forthcoming primaries candidates who will espouse these principles are nominated.

"Thus the Republican party can win and become a great force for liberal, enlightened government," Willkie asserted.

Taft said the committee had "drawn the teeth" of Willkie's proposed resolution advocating approval of an active role for the United States in world affairs so that no one could take exception to the language employed. Walter S. Hallanan of West Virginia, who presented Willkie's proposal to the committee, said the final resolution was a victory for Willkie.

Taft didn't expand on his "teeth drawing" remarks but it evidently referred to the fact that in the committee's final declaration there was no such phraseology as Willkie used in point three of the proposed statement he submitted to the committee.

Willkie's point three contained the recommendation that the party resolve "to undertake now and in the future whatever just and reasonable international responsibilities may be demanded in a modern world. . . ."

Japanese Jitters Seem Growing, in View of Silence

Men of Nippon Visualized Beating Their Brows in Front of Buddha, Asking Answer

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Wide World War Analyst)

The world-wide mystery which has developed out of the bombing of Japan by warplanes which the Nipponese identify as American, but haven't the foggiest notion where the machines came from, is the best possible illustration of why military information frequently has to be withheld from the public.

You wouldn't believe it possible that a fleet of warplanes could bomb several of the principal cities of Japan in broad daylight without it becoming known almost immediately what bases the machines came from. Yet on this fourth day since the historic assault, the little men of Nippon still were squinting at the skies in all directions, and beating their foreheads before the images of the great Buddha, in an effort to solve this nerve-torturing puzzle which has kept them sounding air-raid warnings right up to today.

Even our own people have been dependent on Japan for such news as we have had on this sensational event. The Japs say the planes came from aircraft carriers, but they have contradicted themselves so many times that it's patent they've been lying like troopers in an effort to get Washington to talk and give away the show.

London newspapers have thought the planes might have come from the Aleutian islands, laid their eggs over the Mikado's preserves, and then flown to China. An Italian paper guessed the machines came from bases in Soviet Russia, secretly ceded to the United States.

Nobody Really Knows

So it has gone, but nobody has known just what has happened—except the people responsible for the raid. And it doesn't take great perspicacity to see how valuable all this mystery is to the raiders. It gave them a chance to reach their bases safely, and if those bases happened to be aircraft carriers, as the Japs seem to think, it has given the ships an opportunity to get out of danger.

More to the point, so long as

Frank Matthews Heads Payroll Allotment Group

Harold Brigham, general chairman of the Ulster County War Savings Committee, announces the appointment of Frank B. Matthews as chairman of his committee on the Payroll Allotment Plan.

This latter committee is now being organized in the city and county, with the duty of contacting every payroll business with a plan for patriotic employers to make systematic payroll deductions toward the purchase of War Savings Bonds for employes who voluntarily agree to the plan.

Some businesses in Kingston and Ulster county, and many throughout the country, already have successfully adopted this plan, and, while the employes receive a good investment return on their savings, they are immeasurably assisting their government to achieve victory, Mr. Brigham said today.

Forde Warns Australia Japan Might Try to Invade Continent Within Month

May Hit Russia

Chinese Say Japanese Are Girding for War With Russia

By ROGER D. GREENE
(Associated Press War Editor)

Japan launched an apparent "peace offensive" today as new air-raid alarms were reported to have sounded in central and western Japan and the Japanese cabinet received details on the damage inflicted by American bombers in Saturday's historic assaults on Tokyo, Yokohama, Nagoya and Kobe.

While warning of the propaganda danger, American officials have already discounted such an Axis peace drive with the declaration that the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo bloc could not be trusted in a negotiated peace.

The new air-raid alarms in Japan were the second since planes with the U. S. insignia spread flaming destruction and terror across a 1,000-mile trail on Saturday.

A Berlin broadcast said the alarm sounded in the afternoon and was lifted in central Japan by an all-clear at 5 p. m., Japanese time (4 a. m., eastern war time.)

Japan's west coast faces China, indicating that the planes may have come from the Chinese mainland. Imperial Tokyo headquarters said yesterday that some of the big U. S. bombers which took part in the raids Saturday had "escaped" to bases in China.

"For central Japan, the all clear sounded about 5 p. m., while the alarm remained in force for western Japan, especially for Kyushu," the broadcast said.

Kyushu, one of the four main islands of the Japanese archipelago, lies nearest to China and is the scene of the great Sasebo naval base, a teeming industrial belt and the port of Nagasaki.

The German broadcast did not say whether any bombs were dropped.

In Tokyo, Japanese cabinet ministers minimized the damage inflicted in Saturday's raids, asserting that the transportation system was "hardly disturbed," that the postal service was fully resumed soon after the planes left, and that Japanese life was affected only in a few instances.

While Japan thus minimized the first aerial attack in her history, three days after the initial shock had worn off, Australia's army Minister Francis M. Forde declared in Brisbane that "the war has turned in our favor" and that the approaching allied offensive "will be a staggering spectacle."

"The day for it to be unleashed is not yet here," Forde said, "but it is not too far off."

Forde warned that a Japanese attempt to invade Australia may come within the next four weeks, declaring:

"To think the Japanese will concentrate on India and not come here would be foolishness. We must be prepared for the worst."

Signs of a possible Japanese "peace offensive" cropped up in a Tokyo broadcast quoting Toyohiko Kagawa, Japan's best-known Christian leader, as declaring:

"Prayers are being said daily for an early conclusion of the war and restoration of peace throughout the world."

In this connection, authoritative observers have forecast a Japanese peace drive as soon as she had conquered the territories desired in her "Greater East Asia Co-prosperity Sphere."

With the rise of Allied offensive power, Japan may now feel ready to call quits.

Meanwhile, Chinese reports said the Japanese were speeding preparations for possible war against Russia, heavily reinforcing their garrisons in inner Mongolia, which borders Soviet Siberia west of Manchukuo.

On the Burma war front, a furious battle was reported raging around Yenangyaung, in the heart of Burma's ruined oil fields, as British tank-led infantry and a Chinese rifle regiment sought to annihilate isolated Japanese troops.

7,000 British Are Saved

Chinese military dispatches said Chinese reinforcements had recaptured Yenangyaung, saving 7,000 encircled British troops and 100 supply trucks in the first Allied victory of the Burma campaign. Chinese troops drove the invaders three miles south of the oil town.

The Chinese reported they had killed 500 Japanese and lost only 100 in the Yenangyaung area, where British engineers had already blown up 6,000 oil wells to prevent them from falling into Japanese hands.

The Japanese troops cut off in

O'Hare Gets Medal, Promotion

Daring U. S. Naval Aviator Receives Congressional Medal of Honor; Is Lieutenant Commander

Washington, April 21 (AP)—Lieutenant Edward H. O'Hare, the intrepid naval aviator who destroyed five Japanese bombers and damaged a sixth in five eventful minutes, received from his commander in chief, President Roosevelt, today the congressional medal of honor and a promotion to the rank of lieutenant commander.

Standing at attention, with his eyes blinking rapidly, O'Hare heard the Chief Executive read a citation which called his feat "one of the most daring, if not the most daring single action in the history of combat aviation."

Then, while the President clasped his hand, O'Hare watched his bride place the medal around his neck.

Calling attention to the stripes of a lieutenant junior grade on the sleeve of the young officer, the President remarked that O'Hare had not yet time to get the fixin's of a lieutenant commander and then handed O'Hare the promotion papers boosting him two grades.

Almost inaudiably, O'Hare acknowledged his promotion, "that is very nice," "thank you very much."

Then the Chief Executive read the citation, which he said was more important than awarding the promotion.

Before the brief ceremony in his office, Mr. Roosevelt had called over Mrs. O'Hare, saying he wanted to meet her, too, and greeted Representative Cochran (D.-Mo.), who appointed O'Hare to the United States naval academy.

Then, after reading the citation, Mr. Roosevelt took the highest award the nation can bestow on one of its heroes, the bronze silver star of the medal of honor, from a leather case and fumbled with the snap on its blue ribbon, failing to open it.

The Chief Executive said he would have to ask Mrs. O'Hare, whose hands were more skillful than his, to put the medal around the neck of her hero husband.

With a bit of coaching from the President, she unfastened the clask and hung the medal around O'Hare's neck.

A committee of prominent persons, most of them residents of New York city, is working on a plan to continue the activities of the Wiltwyck School at West Park.

It recently was announced that the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society, which has conducted the school, had been forced to discontinue this one of their projects, due to lack of funds.

Dr. H. L. Bibby of Kingston, who is a member of the committee, said that the school is performing a much needed work in rehabilitating colored children from the lowest economic group in New York city. He and other members of the committee feel that the work should be continued, if possible, to secure the necessary support.

U.S. Aerial Units Are Lining Up for Drive With R. A. F. Against German Bases

London, April 21 (AP)—First units of a United States aerial striking force which will fly side by side with the R. A. F. are already being ferried to British operational bases, reliable sources reported today.

Weeks ago Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt said the Yanks were coming. Last Saturday General George C. Marshall, U. S. Army chief of staff, reaffirmed the American decision to join in Britain's offensive against German bases in Europe.

London air observers say they expect to see the red, white and blue insignia of U. S. Army bombing planes in the sky any day now.

Nearly all aviation correspondents of British newspapers have been speculating on their imminent arrival. The first were expected to be heavy planes capable of flying the Atlantic and going into service quickly after mechanical tuneups and establishment of base facilities, most of which have been provided ready-made by the British.

To follow will be medium bombers and possibly dive-bombers, which some commentators have long regarded as a need of the British air force. The R. A. F. now has some on order in the United States. The shorter-ranged craft must be sent by ship and will take longer to deliver.

"Soon at airdromes all over Britain there will be gathered the force of planes that will make this country the world's greatest air base," said the London Daily Sketch.

"To augment the already powerful bomber striking force of the R. A. F. will come hundreds of United States aircraft — giant bombers, medium bombers and dive-bombers—flown by American air crews."

It is expected that the planes will be completely serviced by American mechanics, whose proficiency particularly impresses the British.

More Than Fifth Of Y.M.C.A. Goal Reached in Drive

Pledges Total 210 Making Sum of $2,460 Now in at Workers' First Report

More than a fifth of the goal set in the annual financial drive of the local Y. M. C. A. was reported by the workers in the first report meeting held Monday evening at the association.

Last night 210 pledges totaling $2,460 were reported. The goal set this year is $11,956 needed to carry on the successful work of the "Y" in Kingston.

The guest speaker of the evening last night was the Rev. Frank L. Gollnick, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran Church of Spring street, who stressed the importance of an organization such as the "Y" in the community life of a city. He said it would be hard to realize a city without a "Y".

This was a day of many appeals, said the Rev. Mr. Gollnick but you judge the "Y" on its accomplishments, not on its cost, but what it does for the youth of the nation in character building.

The "Y", said the speaker, teaches all races, creeds and colors to live together in unity and fellowship. This is the greatest nation in all the world. It is the greatest nation since the dawn of civilization, and one of the forces that is help making this country great is the Y. M. C. A.

This drive cannot fail for this city needs the "Y" and the "Y" needs the city. Its program of character building among the youth of the city, irrespective of creed or race, is needed and especially so in these days of emergency.

Must Conquer

In closing the Rev. Mr. Gollnick said "Think of those letters, the Y. M. C. A. To me tonight they Stand for You Must Conquer for America."

During the evening Alderman Paul Zucca, with Danny Bittner at the piano, led the workers in the singing of popular songs.

Judge Harry H. Flemming, general chairman of the drive this year, presided, and before calling for the reports of the workers he pointed out that among the activities of the association during these strenuous days was the granting of all the privileges of the association to the soldiers passing through the city. This was done without charge. He also called attention to the free swimming instructions that were being given to boys and girls.

Four Divisions

This year there are four divisions of workers with Division No. 1 in charge of James Rowe; Division 2 in charge of Edward Strong; Division 3 in charge of Allen Baker, and Division 4 in charge of Chester A. Baltz, Jr.

The first report by divisions follows:

	Pledges	Amt.
Division 1	46	$ 246
Division 2	28	88
Division 3	50	270
Division 4	66	281
Special gifts	20	1,575
First day total	210	$2,460

A box of cigars was awarded to Division 4 for reporting the largest number of pledges, while the individual workers in each division reporting the most pledges were: Edward Bonesteel, 9 pledges totaling $51; Henry Beichert, 7 pledges, $27; S. Maxwell Taylor, one pledge, $100; Edward DeWitt, 10 pledges, $75.

Judge Flemming in closing the report meeting said that the drive had just got started. It means, he said, that there is a great deal of work ahead in order to put the drive across.

Attention was called to the fact that the budget this year is $572 less than the 1941 budget in spite of a 10 per cent increase in the cost of supplies used to operate the building.

The next report meeting of the workers will be held Thursday night at the "Y" when the guest speaker will be County Judge J. Edward Conway.

Would Drop Plans

Washington, April 20 (AP)—The Office of Defense Transportation today requested the states of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania to drop plans for setting clocks ahead an additional hour. Such action would be "wasteful of necessary public transportation facilities," declared Director Joseph B. Eastman in telegrams to the governors.

STRIKE PLAYS UP NOISE

Earpiercing engine screeches were the feature of a one-hour protest strike staged by railroad men in Mexico to show their solidarity with the people of Mexico in the nationwide complaint against the high cost of living and the "refusal of capital to improve the condition of workers." The workers seek a 35 per cent increase on all salaries below $500 a month, and a smaller increase on salaries above that amount.

New Paltz Normal Is Now Elevated To College Status

Governor Lehman last week signed the bill authorizing the change of name of the New Paltz Normal School to New Paltz Teachers College, thus giving public recognition and legal sanction to the collegiate calibre of the work that has been done in the school for the past four years.

At its January meeting the Board of Regents gave the school the right to grant the Collegiate Bachelor of Education degree and it had since been generally felt that the legislature would take the next logical step and change the name to conform with the character of the work offered.

This change in name continues the same status of the school and the institution will continue to prepare teachers for the grades of the elementary schools and the focus of interest will continue to be the grade school child.

The action of the Board of Regents, the legislature and Governor Lehman is a seal of public approval put upon the progressive advances already taken by the Normal School. New Paltz has been particularly successful in creating and maintaining a highly professional attitude to the work of preparing teachers. A large percentage of the faculty take definite responsibility in the activities carried on in the School of Practice while a number of grade supervisors teach classes in the college department.

For 20 years since Dr. Van den Berg came to New Paltz as principal of the Normal School the faculty members have been and are still engaged in post graduate study preparing themselves to meet the instructional demands of a four-year college course which leads to a degree.

In celebration of the authorization by the legislature of the right to become the New Paltz Teachers College, members of the faculty and student body last Wednesday evening staged a surprise observance of the event. President Lawrence H. Van den Berg of the State Teachers College of New Paltz was pleasantly surprised when the student body led by Prof. Howard B. Hoffmann, and headed by the school band, called at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Van den Berg and invited them to a ride through the village streets in a surry drawn by a team of horses which had been provided for the occasion.

KINGSTON, NEW YORK, APRIL 21, 1942

The bombing of Tokyo and other Japanese cities by American planes, reported last Saturday, was something the American people had longed for but not expected yet. With other current developments, it has brought cheer and reassurance after a period of frustration. It is evident on many points, and in many forms, that the Allied war machine is really beginning now to move in a big way, faster than was thought possible a few weeks ago.

Nearly every day since the coming of Spring weather there have been reports of larger and bolder operations. The aerial war is being carried by Britain into Germany and her occupied territories on a scale matching anything of the kind since Dunkirk. The Russians are not only holding their vast front but forcing the fight. China, rich in man-power and courage but poor in equipment, is doing well with what she has. Naturally the thing of foremost interest and satisfaction in this country just now is the coming of war industry into big production and the resultant military activity on important fronts.

From now on there is going to be strong and continuous action on all fronts. And as the tempo steps up, let the American public keep steadily in mind the big debt they owe alike to the fighting forces and the men who make what they fight with.

THE NEXT BOOM

Thurman Arnold, the free-lance shaker-upper at Washington who seems to belong to no party and have no inhibitions, is talking of a big boom in post-bellum production. This attitude naturally attracts attentions because of the tradition that war is necessarily followed by depression. It usually has been so in the past. But Mr. Arnold insists that there is no reason why it need be so, and some other people of consequence are inclined to agree with him.

This iconoclast runs into trouble, though, when as a part of his planning for a peace boom he urges the freeing of patents. No doubt such action would result in a great liberation of industrial and financial power. Presumably patents now operating would be used more extensively, and thousands of patents now kept inactive, for competitive reasons, would be poured into the productive machinery. But is this nation of inventors ready to make its thousands of valuable patents public property, without compensation? Probably not.

ABSORBING THE JAPANESE

To hear some people talk, you would think that the attempted Japanese conquest of China was not vital. "The Chinese will eventually absorb them all," we are told. But will they?

In the past, China has been repeatedly conquered by barbarian tribes. The Manchus, who ruled up to the establishment of the republic in 1911, were the latest. Such tribes eventually were absorbed, largely through their desire to adopt Chinese ways. This was in part because they knew themselves to be inferior. Even more, as wanderers from the steppes and the forests, they were unequal to organizing, taxing and administering a civilized state. They had to learn Chinese ways to survive.

This is not true of the Japanese. Whatever we may think of them, their government is equal to modern conditions and the competition of the rest of the world. There is no necessity for their merging with the Chinese order. If they conquer China, they will remain apart from the Chinese for a long, long time just as the Germans remain apart from their victims.

SPEED AS USUAL

Automobile traffic is said to be reduced already nearly one-fourth. It will shrink a great deal more than that before the travel curve starts up again. It may be many years before new cars can be bought freely.

But it would not be suspected from the highway traffic. Most of the cars on the road seem to bowl along as usual, wearing themselves out about twice as fast as is necessary. A thrifty observer naturally wonders whether these speedy drivers burning up the road and the rubber between towns don't understand the situation, or don't care. About half the driving seems strangely reckless and improvident.

It may take a sharp rise in the price of gasoline to impress the speeders. That is something they can understand, although it is usually a less important factor than the wear and tear on the car—and its shoes.

UNUSED RESOURCES

Old emery mines, long disused, are being reopened in the Berkshire hills of Western Massachusetts. Imports from Turkey drove out the domestic product, forcing the closing of the mines. Now war necessities have brought attention back to these disused shafts. As the mining process calls for a special technique, it is lucky that a few of the old-time emery miners are still alive to direct the younger men.

The war is going to make us re-survey resources in many fields, and make use of materials that we scorned in the lavish days of the past. In these respects it will do the nation good.

ULCER OF STOMACH AND INTESTINE

For many years the treatment of peptic ulcer—ulcer of the stomach and ulcer of the small intestine into which stomach empties—has been small meals taken often and an alkali powder to overcome the excess acid digestive juice in the stomach. This is known as the Sippy treatment and this, with small variations, is routine or regular treatment.

It will come as a surprise to ulcer patients and to many physicians also to learn that a series of 41 cases has been successfully treated by a different method. Drs. George F. Dick and C. Wesley Eisele, in the Journal of the American Medical Association, state that the treating of stomach and duodenal ulcers (peptic ulcer) will progress satisfactorily without the attempted neutralization of stomach acidity with alkalis.

"Under hourly treatment with milk and cream without the use of alkalis, the speed of healing of peptic ulcers compares favorably with that under other methods of treatment. Such treatment brought about (1) the prompt disappearance of symptoms and the complete comfort of the patient, (2) the disappearance of blood from the stool when blood was present, and (3) the disappearance of the cavity of the ulcer as shown by X-rays."

These physicians state that while the present treatment of overcoming the excess acid stomach juice by the use of alkalis has been accepted as the 'best' treatment, nevertheless the fact that different alkalis are being used from time to time for peptic ulcer treatment shows that alkali treatment is not altogether satisfactory.

"In their series of 41 cases, 7 were suffering from stomach ulcer and 34 from duodenal or intestinal ulcer. X-ray studies weer used to show the progress of the treatment. Seventy per cent of the 'cavities' of duodenal ulcers disappeared within 75 days. Compltee relief of symptoms occurred in nearly all cases before the cavity was completely healed. In 31 cases all symptoms were controlled within one week.

This treament—milk and cream every hour without use of alkalis—has been reported before. Another 41 cases are now reported.

It will be interesting to learn of further cases treated by this method as peptic ulcer is increasing everywhere in these war days.

Diet Suggestions in Peptic Ulcer

All you need to do to obtain it is send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Barton, Post Office Box 150, Times Square Station, New York, N. Y., and ask for leaflet by name.

SWEETENING IN THE SOUTH

Sugar rationing won't bother some 70,000 low-income farm families in the Southeast. They will grow their own "sweetening," and four times as much of it on the average as they ever grew before. Thus they are contributing to the Department of Agriculture's Food for Freedom program. These families' plans are on record because they are borrowers under the Farm Security program. They live in Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida.

Stepping up production to meet increased food goals announced last fall, these families rearranged theirf arming schedules, and wrote new sugarcane and sorgham "planks" into their farm plans, many for a half-acre patch.

When food goals were revised after Pearl Harbor, many of these families decided to increase production to three acres each. They are planning for enough cane or sorgham to satisfy home needs for "sweetening," with a little extra for market.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

Kerhonkson Troop

The Kerhonkson Boy Scouts, one of the fastest growing troops in the county, has started its spring offensive with plans for its 41 members.

New assistant scoutmasters have been added in order to handle the rapid growth of the troop. The scouts plan to have first-aid station for the blackouts and also messengers to assist the air raid wardens. Special members are being trained to organize the first aid group. The scout services are being offered to the community, as ushers at public affairs and also to have a scout stationed at Broadway and 42nd street crossing to help the children at noon and after school. During the coming months plans are made to blaze trails through surrounding vicinities with shelters and fireplaces at regular intervals.

The scouts have purchased a paper baler in order to sell the paper which they collect for purchasing additional uniforms.

There has never been such enthusiastic response by the parents in the history of this community in the unity between the scouts and community.

Private motor vehicle ownership in the United States has risen 20 per cent in the past decade while government ownership of motor vehicles has increased 146 per cent.

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

From time to time I have been writing in this column about the days of the open trolley cars and summer nights at Kingston Point Park, and I ran across an item the other day that stated that work of constructing the old Colonial Subway was started on March 31, 1905.

Many of the older readers will recall the old subway under the West Shore railroad tracks through which the trolley cars ran for many years.

Entrance to the old subway for trolley patrons was down through stairs leading from a kiosk just south of the passenger station.

The trolley tracks came up Hasbrouck avenue through Prince street in Dederick street and entered the subway near the Van Slyke & Horton cigar factory, emerging on the uptown side of the tracks to run out Thomas street, up Broadway to and out Cedar street.

At one time when the elimination of the Broadway crossing was agitated there was some talk of using the abandoned subway tto convey traffic under the tracks. For some reason this idea was said not to be feasible and was never adopted.

I also recall the days at the turn of the century when there was a line of trolley track on the plot of gorund now used for parking cars off Railroad avenue and adjoining the railroad tracks.

This plot of ground in later years, before it was used for parking cars, was kept as a lawn and enclosed by a fence.

The track carried one trolley car which would meet all trolley cars, either north or south bound, and if there were any trolley passengers alighting who were enroute to the railroad station they would be conveyed the short distance in the trolley car.

Just what year this service was discontinued and the tracks taken up I do not recall offhand.

On March 8, 1915, William F. Hoehn resigned as secretary of the Kingston Chamber of Commerce to take up a similar position with the Peekskill Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Hoehn first came to Kingston to serve as general secretary of the local "Y" which position he held for some years until he was called to become secretary of the business organization.

On March 30, 1915, the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce tendered Mr. Hoehn a farewell dinner at The Weiner on Broadway.

Mr. Hoehn was succeeded as secretary of the Chamber of Commerce by James E. Canfield.

Differences Among G. O. P. Committeemen Convened in Chicago Are Not Surprising

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, April 21—The differences of opinion among the Republican national committeemen gathered in Chicago who have been trying to formulate a policy toward the present war and after-the-war problems are not surprising in view of the political history of the issues of the last war.

Many of the Republicans who have leaned toward the isolationist side have a lively recollection of how public opinion swung back to isolationism in 1920 and influenced governmental policy for a decade. The possibility that history may repeat itself is doubtless governing those who hesitate to go along with the Willkie faction of the party which believes in an active policy of international cooperation after the war.

During the last war the Republican party pledged itself to all-out backing of the war and the Republican isolationists feel that in doing this in the present war they need not go in now for after-the-war committments of international policy.

From the standpoint of the international-minded group this will unquestionably open up a far-reaching debate inside the Republican party and will naturally give the New Deal groups the opportunity they yearn for in order to accuse the Republican party of going back to the isolationism of the 1920's.

This is not a simple issue to handle on the stump because while Franklin Roosevelt campaigned for the vice presidency in 1920 on a League of Nations platform, he abandoned that stand in his pre-convention campaign of 1932 for the presidency. Then when he was president he did not go along with the conclusions reached at the London Economic Conference of July, 1933, and this incident is often cited as an example of lack of international cooperation that helped plant the seeds for the economic unrest on the continent which led to the outbreak of the present war in 1939.

From 1933 on, the Roosevelt administration occasionally supported a strong international policy as, for instance, in the famous "quarantine" speech made by the President in Chicago but there can be no doubt that it was not till 1938 that the administraion began to throw aside all vestiges of isolationism.

Looking back at the 1918 and 1920 elections the issue of international policy was not clearly presented on either occasion. Thus the 1918 battlecry of the Republicans was one of resentment against alleged implications of disloyalty levelled at them in Mr. Wilson's famous appeal for a vote of confidence. The 1920 campaign moreover, saw such eminent figures as Charles Evans Hughes, Elihu Root and William Howard Taft telling their fellow-Republicans that a vote for Warren Harding was a vote for American entry into the League of Nations with reservations. After the election, however, President-Elect Harding chose to construe the verdict as a repudiation of the pro-league groups in the party and he helped to soothe the wounds of the party by selecting Mr. Hughes as secretary of state. When Mr. Coolidge succeeded Mr. Harding he also adopted the isolationist position as a definite committment of his party and this sentiment pervaded both Republican and Democrat parties for a decade or more thereafter.

What is going on in Chicago at the Republican gathering, therefore, may make sharp divisions now but he would be a bold political leader who attempts to predict now what the American people will want to do about foreign policy when the war is over. And yet Mr. Willkie's chances for leadership in 1944 depend on how he fares ultimately with exactly that question.

Army Regulations Modify Physical Standards for Men

New army regulations modifying and clarifying the physical standards for enlistment or induction into the military service were announced today by the war department.

The new regulations add a new classification to three old ones. In addition to Class 1-A, physically qualified for general military service; Class 1-B, physically unfit for general military service, but fit for limited military service, and Class 4, physically unfit for any military service, there is a new designation of Class 1-A (suspended).

The new classification will include individuals who are found to have disqualifying defects of a nature which may be correctible and which, when corrected, will qualify them for general military service.

These individuals will not be inducted until the defects are satisfactorily corrected. They will be subject to re-examination by army examining boards when the defects have been corrected, and may then be reclassified in 1-A.

It is pointed out that common examples of such remediable defects include, among others, dental defects, correctible nasal obstruction; simple goiter; repairable hernia, and remediable nutritional defects.

The regulations also provide for up to three days of hospitalization for men whose physical fitness for military service cannot be determined without hospital study. Army or other government hospitals will be used for this purpose when practicable. When they are not available, civilian hospitals will be used.

Requirements for height, weight and chest measurement remain the same, with a minimum height of 60 inches and maximum 78 inches. Minimum weight at 105 pounds. Men whose weight is greater than the standard may be classified 1-A if the overweight is not so excessive as to interfere with military training.

The new regulations change the standard acuity of vision to provide that certain cases which previously had been classified as 1-B may now be classified as 1-A with the specification that the men serve in non-combatant branches.

While the minimum requirement for the arms and services remains at 20/100 in each eye without glasses, if correctible to 20-40 in each eye with glasses, the standard for service in the non-combatant branches is 20-200 in each eye without glasses, if correctible to 20-40.

Requirements as to teeth are clarified in the new regulations in respect to accepting fixed and removable bridges and partial or full dentures in lieu of natural teeth.

Examining physicians are cautioned to be especially thorough in search for symptoms of pulmonary tuberculosis.

Washington In Wartime

By Jack Stinnett

Washington — The capital in wartime:

Opening day of the American League baseball season was a sad occasion for Washington's fans (Yankees 7, Senators goose egg), but there was one sight that was well worth the price of admission.

It was Vice-President Wallace throwing out the first ball. Mr. Wallace was a last-minute substitute for President Roosevelt, who explained that "war and work" would keep him away from the diamond for the first opening day since he has been in Washington.

"Get back," Mr. Wallace shouted to the players gathered eagerly around the Presidential box, like bridesmaids waiting starry-eyed to catch the bouquet.

None did. None, that is, except Buddy Hassett, a Yankee utility infielder. Hassett stood far out towards second base, absent-mindedly shifting his weight first on one foot and then the other.

The Vice President let fly. Far out over the mass of hopping players the ball arched — out towards second base. And Hassett snagged it.

The face of Alex Carrasquel, Clark Griffith's Venezuelan importation, fell an inch, possibly two inches. His last feverish cry of "Peech eet to me" died on his lips. With the rest of the players, he trotted back to the field. What he and the rest had forgotten was that Mr. Wallace throws a boomerang in his spare time and has developed quite a wing.

Hassett wasn't hep to the boomeran angle either. "I figured either I'd get it or I wouldn't get it," he explained simply. "I didn't see any sense in getting caught in the middle of that mob."

Here are a couple of items I picked up over at the Treasury Department press room the other day—not big enough to get on the wires but they give you an idea of the kind of little things that go on.

Item No. 1 was about a counterfeiter arrested in Mobile, Ala. The Secret Service discovered some ink stains on his trousers and found it was the same kind of ink as was used on the counterfeit bills the man was accused of making.

Confronted with this evidence, the man confessed that he had engraved the phony plates on sheets of lead with an ice pick!

And the bills were pretty fair imitations.

Item No. 2 was about the Virginia woman who apparently had forgotten we've had two wars since the late difficulty between the North and South.

She wrote in to the Treasury Department to complain because some war bond literature contained a quotation from Abraham Lincoln.

Minimum Raised For Area Workers

Knitgoods Workers Pay Is Now 40 Cents Per Hour

The employes of the knitting mills of Kingston, Catskill and Hudson will receive wage increase this week as the result of a wage order issued by L. Metcalf Walling, administrator of the wage and hour division, U. S. Department of Labor.

The wage order provides that the minimum wage in the knitted outerwear industry shall be raised to 40 cents per hour from 35 cents per hour which prevailed previously. The wage order goes into effect the week beginning April 20.

The 40 cent minimum is in accordance with the recommendation of the Knitted Outerwear Industry Committee. Employes were represented on this committee by various officers of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, including President David Dubinsky, Vice President Abraham Katovsky, Joseph Schwartz, Louis Nelson and Jacob Halpern. G. Allan Dash, Jr., of the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce at the University of Pennsylvania, was chairman of the committee.

It is estimated that the 40 cent minimum wage will result in direct increases for some 6,000 out of approximately 23,500 wage-earners employed in the industry in the United States.

Slight Fire on Barge in Creek

Grand Jury Says Physician Violates New York's Laws

Dr. Edward S. Cowles, Who Founded Bowery Aid, Denies His Work Is Profitable

New York, April 21 (AP)—Some 300 patients awaiting treatment for various neuroses at Dr. Edward S. Cowles' Body and Mind Foundation received a rude shock last night when the exclusive East Side establishment was raided by the police.

The Foundation, its director and two of its employes were charged in a grand jury information with violating the New York state laws governing the practice of medicine.

State Attorney General John J. Bennett Jr., said the raid followed the filing of a five-count information so accusing the Foundation, Robert Rebold and Eveline Dolin.

The attorney general further announced that his office and that of the state department of education had begun proceedings for the revocation of Dr. Cowles' license and that among the papers served during the raid was one requiring the physician's presence May 7 before the medical grievance committee of the state education department.

Dr. Cowles, who also operates a private sanitarium on nearby Park avenue known as the Park Avenue Hospital, protested the proceedings.

He declared that the clinic was a charitable institution and that no one made any profit out of the fees received from patients, and insisted there was no basis for the grand jury information charging the corporation and others with:

Unlawful practice of medicine; maintaining, operating and conducting a dispensary and clinic from May 3, 1934, up to April 15, 1942, without having first obtained a license; displaying signs and other things on which were written the words "dispensary" and "clinic," in violation of the social welfare law; conspiracy to violate the state education law by practicing medicine unlawfully.

Dr. Cowles, a widely known psychiatrist and neurologist and a graduate of the Harvard Medical School, first founded the clinic in 1923 in the Episcopal Church of St. Mark's-in-the-Bouwerie.

The clinic moved later after a controversy with church officials.

PPER & BRASS

This is Mr. Brown

Here are some of the copper and brass goods that Mr. Brown sold in his store last year.

This is a newspaper advertisement Mr. Brown ran LAST YEAR

Mr. Brown isn't running advertisements like that this year. There is a shortage of copper and brass, due to national defense, so Mr. Brown hasn't enough copper and brass goods to sell this year.

But Mr. Brown hasn't stopped advertising!

Mr. Brown knows that during World War I many businessmen whose stocks of goods were temporarily cut down did stop advertising.

He knows that because they stopped advertising many of those businessmen lost their customers AND DIDN'T GET THEM BACK WHEN THE WAR WAS OVER.

So Mr. Brown keeps his name before the public by keeping on advertising in the newspapers. He advertises new items—offers service on copper and brass articles. He shows his customers that he is interested in being useful to them—in giving them valuable service.

And when the war is over, when Mr. Brown again has plenty of copper and brass goods to sell, he won't have to worry about his customers forgetting him. They will still be in the habit of dealing with him.

There are many "Mr. Browns" in America today—many businessmen who are advertising even though their shelves are understocked, because they want the public to remember them, to stay in the habit of dealing with them, when the war is over.

"The difference between people can be as well explained in terms of their personality sparkle as in any other general term. The superior person is best rather than good or better! Be a little more enthusiastic, determined, persuasive, energetic, forceful than the other fellow. Have a little extra sparkle! Knute Rockne was not only a great football strategist, but he was also a man of superior vitality and leadership. He had the sparkle of enthusiasm, and it was contagious. His story has become one of America's inspirational masterpieces. We all want to emulate his fine qualities of leadership and character. We will admit that most of us could apply ourselves a great deal more. We are likely to withold the extra effort—to let inertia hold us back. We fail to put zest back of what we do. So we fail to enjoy, to accomplish, or to serve as we might. Would it not be well to apply some Rockne sparkle to more of our worthy plans—to throw our whole selves into our training and our work and our leisure? Let us live more intensely. Let us give our personalities a chance to sparkle!

She—Doctor, you told me to show you my tongue, but you haven't even looked at it!

Doctor—No. . . . It was only to keep you quiet while I wrote out the prescription.

It's payroll parasites in Washington that the President really should get rid of.

Sam—Funny thing, isn't it?

Sue—What is?

Sam—that a live man in fact is always dead in earnest.

Mistress—Dora, has my husband been very unhappy while I was away for a month?

Servant—Well, ma'am, at first he was in fine spirits, but toward the end of the time he got less cheerful, and yesterday he was really sad.

Texas entered the Union with the privilege of withdrawing if it so desires.

The prospective tenant—(viewing house)—I think after all, a flat would suit us better.

The caretaker—Well, sir, fer meself, I feel a flat so much like prison; but then, of course, it all depends on what you're accustomed to.

The world is full of would-be leaders who can't even follow successfully.

The champion optimist was just dashing off on vacation carrying a large suitcase. Unfortunately for him, he met his landlord at the entrance to the station.

Landlord—Off on holiday, are you? Well, you've got a nerve to go when you owe me three months rent.

Optimist—You know I can't pay you. Why, I couldn't have had this trip if I hadn't sold that new bath you put in last week!

Here's something even harder to find than the proverbial needle in a haystack—an isolationist today in America.

Effie—Why hasn't Daddy much hair?

Mother—Because he thinks a lot, darling.

Effie (pause)—But why have you got so much, Mummie—?

Mother—Get on with your breakfast.

Governor Signs Bill

Albany, N. Y., April 20 (AP)—Governor Lehman signed today a bill giving the state health commissioner absolute wartime authority over the milk supplies of New York communities. The measure permits the commissioner to embargo, pending investigation, part or all of a community's supply if he suspects contamination through accident, sabotage or enemy action.

Quisling Attacks Teachers

London, April 20 (AP)—Major Vidkun Quisling, premier of the Nazi puppet government of Norway, has issued an ultimatum to school teachers in the German-occupied country to join his National Party Teachers Association by May 1 or lose their jobs, Reuters reported today quoting the Stockholm newspaper Svenska Dagbladet. The Swedish press assumed that the effect of the order may be a virtual suspension of education in Norway.

Chapter 11
Pearl Harbor

UNEVENTFULLY, the following week brought nothing more than routine work at Headquarters for Stephanie, and for Guy Merrill sufficient recovery from his injuries to return to Titan.

Stephanie worried continuously about father even as she realized that his position was no more hazardous than that of hundreds of other San Franciscans upon whose shoulders rested large responsibilities for defense work.

So deep was she in her own thought, she started when she heard her name.

"Stephanie! Wait a moment, please."

Turning, she saw that it was Henri calling, waving to her from the steps of the old Stone mansion next door. Another moment and he was leaping down the steps, crossing the garden adjoining her own.

"Hello!" Stephanie smiled slowly. Then, glancing back at the house from which he had just come, "Looks as if you'd inaugurated a Good Neighbor policy for us already."

Henri bowed slightly over the hand she extended to him. "Amazingly enough, Stephanie, your new neighbors are very old and very good friends of mine from Yokohoma."

"Yokohoma!"

"I was attaché to the Belgian consul there from 1928 until 1935. Mr. Miller was vice-president of the National Bank there," he explained. "He is very charming. He has retired now and plans to live here the rest of his life. That is why he is making such extensive improvements, as you see."

Henri's gesture explained the squad of gardeners busy weeding, trimming, spading up the old, over-grown garden now.

"Yes, I see," she murmured. "What a coincidence that they should have taken this house. Did you know that they were going to?"

Henri shook his head. "Not at all. It was a very pleasant surprise to me. I hope you will give me the privilege of introducing them to you."

"Yes, of course. I should like to meet them."

"Good. Then perhaps you will come with me tomorrow to the reception which they are holding for all their American friends?" he replied promptly.

"Why—thank you. I guess—I can"—reluctantly. Somehow she wasn't really overjoyed at the prospect of meeting her new neighbors but she couldn't think of any good reason why she shouldn't go.

And the reception was really quite elaborate, she realized as Henri steered her through the crowded drawing room toward the receiving line.

Too Gracious

HENRI introduced her to their host and hostess and Stephanie realized she couldn't have been more jittery if she were being presented at Court. And the Millers were most gracious too. Mrs. Miller, tall and white-haired, wore black velvet and real pearls and an air of regality that made Stephanie's simple,

"How do you do, Mrs. Miller," sound like lèse-majesté.

And Mr. Miller himself, who spoke English with a heavy, gutteral accent, looked exactly like the Hollywood version of an Archduke. Van Dyke beard, heavy signet ring, monocle and all.

But, despite the fact that their beautifully furnished drawing room was crowded with distinguished looking guests, the Millers went out of their way to be gracious to their new neighbor. Stephanie flushed a little under their apparent delight in meeting her.

"But she is beautiful, Henri," Mr. Miller said later as he joined them for a cocktail. "You failed to prepare me for such loveliness."

"Thank you," she murmured, scarlet now.

"Look, what is your oinion of the manner in which we have decorated this charming old home?" he asked her earnestly.

Stephanie smiled. "I think you've done beautifully," she said quite sincerely.

"Do you really? I'm very glad," he said gravely. "And now the garden. Come!" He took her arm. "Let me show you what we are doing there." Then, turning to one of the fleet of Japanese menservants who passed great silver trays of thin-stemmed cocktail glasses, he called:

"Tatu!" and then spoke rapidly in what Stephanie supposed must be Japanese.

The boy bowed, disappeared. A moment later he returned bearing Stephanie's fur jacket.

Smiling, but just a bit uncomfortable under such de luxe courtesy, Stephanie tried hard to be interested in the garden Mr. Miller was showing her so proudly.

"I think it will never be as lovely as your garden," he said as they wandered down a long graveled path to the bottom of the garden where a stone wall marked a boundary.

"It will be far more lovely," she insisted. It should be. After all, four expert gardeners should make a difference. Then suddenly, her glance caught a row of little shrubs planted along the wall.

"What is that?" she asked aloud.

"A hedge row. To break the wind here from the Bay," Mr. Miller explained.

"Oh. I see." But she didn't see, though she looked again to be sure, why any real gardener would plant tiny fir trees six inches apart!

Even before they turned back toward the house, Stephanie had set a guard on her tongue.

"Have you lived here long, Miss Merrill?" Mr. Miller wanted to know.

"All my life," she smiled disarmingly. "Why?"

"Ah, then you know our neighbors and perhaps I may hope that you will give us the great pleasure of meeting them," he said smoothly, fingering his monocle. "We want very much to make friends here in our new home."

Stuffed Shirts

WHY, Stephanie demanded of her other self, should he be so concerned about the people who happened to live near him? Besides, she smiled wryly, she couldn't picture Sonoma Street exactly taking the Millers to heart. Guy Merrill would probably be among the first to pronounce them "stuffed shirts."

And, strangely enough, those were exactly Guy's words when at the breakfast table the next morning, Stephanie told him about the elaborate party.

"I'd like to know what his name was before it was Miller," Guy growled over his toast and marmalade. "I don't like the smell of the whole business. People who call themselves Americans and can't speak the language without a foreign accent are either smart spies or stuffed shirts. In either case, I don't like them."

"Be reasonable, Daddy. Just because a man has an accent doesn't mean he hasn't loyalty," Stephanie reminded him logically.

"Sure. I know that. All the same, I don't intend to hob-nob with the Millers. And I'd prefer that you didn't, either."

"Daddy! What ails you? You're beginning to sound like a maiden aunt." But, watching Guy's tired face, she decided to withhold her suspicions until she had something definite to tell.

But in the next instant, all thought of the Millers was banished completely. Tsang, his round face ashen, thrust open the door, blurted:

"My radio say Japanese shooting American boats. Very bad."

Guy jumped to his feet. "What are you saying?"

"Japs in Pearl Harbor. Make war."

"Pearl Harbor!" Stephanie echoed, following her father as he raced toward the living room and the radio. "Pearl Harbor!"

funds by another bill introduced by the assembly rules committee.

Localities would be reimbursed up to 40 per cent by the state, with additional state funds available "in exceptional circumstances."

Simultaneously a Republican party measure was introduced seeking to assure service men of voting privileges this gubernatorial election year, and advance pre-election activities five weeks.

The bill, which would create a $100,000 state war ballot commission, is opposed by minority Democrats who claim it is designed to lengthen the Republican fall gubernatorial campaign.

Fall primary day, September 16, last year, would be advanced to August 11, and state and judicial conventions could open August 18. The 1941 opening was September 24.

An attempt by Democratic Assemblyman Daniel Flynn, to force a floor vote on his resolution proposing a $5,000 investigation of the milk industry's "spread in price between what the farmer receives and what the consumer pays" was lost in the assembly by 47-72 vote.

Senator Fred A. Young, Lowville, Republican, withdrew his controversial bills which would establish rigid physical training programs in high schools during the war emergency.

Bills to Governor

Bills sent to the governor would:

Continue the state's milk publicity campaign to June 30, 1943.

Require persons hereafter becoming members of state retirement system to give up membership if they join a federal retirement system.

Empower the governor to appoint a state coordinator of water supply and permit community cooperation to help bring prompt restoration of municipal water supplies in event of emergency.

Senate-approved bills sent to the assembly would:

Give control of high school athletics to local boards of education, taking such control from the state educational system.

Require liquor retailers to file their price schedules monthly, designed to eliminate price wars.

Assembly-approved bills sent to the senate would:

Permit non-profit farmer cooperatives to create electric power companies with federal-loaned funds.

Increase annual salaries of lower paid state institutional employes by $100.

Permit employers to appeal to the appellate division from standards and appeals board decisions relating to permission for longer working hours in war industries.

Authorize city and county authorities to consolidate war councils and permit leasing and loaning of property to meet emergencies.

Prohibit a person drawing a state pension of $6,000 or more from receiving a defense council salary,—a measure admittedly aimed at Major General John F. O'Ryan, state civilian defense director.

Bills introduced in the assembly would:

Increase maximum unemployment insurance benefits from $15 to $18 weekly, reduce waiting period for benefits from three to two weeks, extend benefit period from 13 to 20 weeks.

Permit prisoners to manufacture "articles or materials necessary for prosecution of the war."

NATIONAL WANT AD WEEK

New York, April 21 (AP)—Stocks today continued the quiet upturn initiated Saturday after last week's drop to nine-year lows.

Fractional gains were general at the opening and some were later extended to a point or so. There was a minor retreat from best levels near the fourth hour, and a few leaders slipped a shade under the previous finals.

Steels, aircrafts, rails and industrials specialties held a fair share of the modest buying interest. The forthcoming government stand on inflation still had a somewhat deflating effect on stock exchange business, but selective support was entered on the strength of the market's stability in the face of Laval's declaration of Nazi loyalty in his first address as chief of the Vichy government.

Stocks ruling higher most of the time included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Douglas, Sperry, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, Eastman, Chesapeake & Ohio, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific and Great Northern.

Bonds were irregularly higher. Commodities were mixed.

Brewster Aeronautical was active in the curb around Monday's final. It dropped ¾ yesterday on the navy's action in taking over the company's plants because of "dissatisfaction with the management."

Other curb stocks showing improvement included American Gas, Creole Petroleum, Fairchild Engine and Pennroad. Gulf Oil and Humble Oil dipped.

Textiles Must Give Help to Government

Washington, April 21 (AP)—The government ordered the cotton textile industry today to convert approximately half of its facilities to war production within the next 60 days.

Under terms of the order, cotton mills must convert specified percentages of their looms, now making various cotton fabrics commonly used in clothing and home furnishings, to production of bag osnaburg—a coarse bagging material—and bag sheetings.

Effect of the action will be to double the production of material required for sand bags, camouflage cloth and food and agricultural bagging.

Darlan Promises Loyalty to Forces; Gives His Order

Vichy, Unoccupied France, April 21 (AP)—Admiral Jean Darlan, commander of all of France's armed forces, promised his fighting men today that "You can rely on me as I rely on you to proceed further along the path of honor and to defend the empire."

The commander in chief's order of the day said:

"Since the marshal has done me the great honor to nominate me commander in chief of the military forces under his direct command he has drawn more closely the ties which for long months past have bound me to you and this fills me with great pride.

"Freed of the obligations which I had taken upon myself out of discipline and love of my country, I can devote my whole time and my whole energy to you, my comrades.

"You can rely on me as I rely on you to proceed further along the path of honor and to defend the empire under the high authority of the marshal.

"Long live the marshal!

"Long live France!"

Darlan's order of the day underscored the separation of military and civil authority arranged by Petain when he named Darlan commander of the armed forces responsible solely to him before assigning civil authority to Pierre Laval, the new Vichy chief of government, on the same basis.

Refugee Worker Will Speak at Luncheon

Senior Hadassah will hold its annual Youth Aliyah luncheon tomorrow at the Hotel Stuyvesant at 1 o'clock. Guest speaker will be Mrs. Jacob Ehrlich.

While here Mrs. Ehrlich will present Jewish child refugee problems, and the work being done in the Holy Land by Youth Aliyah. Mrs. Ehrlich has not only worked with Jewish children before the advent of the Nazi regime in Germany, but has been able to carry over her professional knowledge of adolescent problems to the more challenging and complicated field of refugee work.

She was educated at the universities of Vienna and Prague, having received her degrees in modern philosophy and the history of art. From 1923 to 1938 she was on the teaching staff of several of the high schools of Prague and Vienna. Later she became a member of the Board of the Girls' Orphanage of Vienna.

Mrs. Ehrlich has been active in the work of the Women's International Zionist Organization and of Youth Aliyah since its inception. She attended the World Zionist Congress in 1926 and again in 1939.

As one who has seen the devastation caused by war and persecution in Europe, and has helped to mold the work of the Youth Aliyah movement, Mrs. Ehlich is equipped to review the implications of the present tragic conditions in Europe, and to appeal for a constructive way out for the children.

The committee for this luncheon looks forward to a large attendance of Hadassah members and otherwise interested people in this important work.

Reservations may be made with Mrs. Alfred D. Ronder, telephone 2132, or Mrs. Oscar B. London, 4459.

Good Taste Today

READER WANTS TO KNOW HOW TO SEAT FIVE WOMEN AND THREE MEN

As most of my readers know, an even number of men and women to be seated at table is seated alternately—even when their number is eight or 12, in which case the hostess gives her own place to a man while her husband keeps his. Today comes the somewhat different question of how to seat five women and three men. My reader explains:

"In this case I keep my own place, but it seats me between two men while each of my women guests is seated between one man and one woman. The whole plan is, a woman on either side of my husband, another woman next to both of these, one man next to each woman, and then I at my end between the two men.

"I wonder whether I should move around to the side to give an especially attractive woman my place between the two men? Or is it best that I keep my place? Another puzzling question concerns my sister who is a widow. How should she seat two men and four women? If the men are seated next to her it leaves the woman opposite her sitting between two other women—which does not seem very polite."

Her seating of eight is right. Her sister's table of six will be better divided by putting one man on her own right, then two women, the the other man, then the third woman next to herself.

'And Family' Often Confusing

Dear Mrs. Post: We are giving an engagement party for our daughter and would like to ask one question in connection with the invitations. Just how wrong is it to address the envelope "Mr. and Mrs . . . and family" since we wish to include their three daughters who live at home?

Answer: The "wrongness" of being a not fashionable practice is very unimportant. Its real wrongness is that it is indefinite In a family of graduated ages, one does not know whether the grandparents and the half-grown members of the family are—or are not— included. Correctly the invitation in question should be addressed:

Mr. and Mrs. John Smith
The Misses Smith

Y. Leaflets cannot be mailed unless self-addressed envelope bears correct amount of postage.

An interlocutory judgment dissolving the marriage of Thomas L. May and Elizabeth Fitzgerald May was filed in the Ulster county clerk's office on Monday. The decree was granted by Justice Harry E. Schirick, following a hearing at special term of Supreme Court on April 18. Attorney for the petitioner, Thomas L. May, is Hyman L. Fischbach of 70 Pine street, New York city. The parties were married in Toronto, Canada, July 24, 1907, and petitioner declares that the defendant has been absent from home for more than five years.

Woman Held on Charge After Phoenicia Accident

Mrs. Edna M. Carson, 52, of 809 Clifton avenue, Newark, N. J., was fined $20, sentence suspended, when arraigned before Justice Flavius Dibbell of Phoenicia Sunday on a charge of reckless driving.

Mrs. Carson's car, according to Troopers Dunn and Maish, struck a station wagon owned by William Oakes, which had been parked with its right wheels off the pavement, then continued along the road about a quarter of a mile when it left the highway near the Phoenicia Manufacturing Co. plant, knocked down several guard rail posts and went down a steep embankment, coming to a stop with its front wheels in the Esopus creek. Mrs. Carson said that she had lost control of the car.

Neither Mrs. Carson, nor the two passengers in her car, her husband, William J. Carson, 70, and Joseph F. Patscoe, 50, of South Orange, was injured. The car was damaged badly.

The station wagon had been parked by Miss Priscilla Lane, who had taken a number of children to St. Francis de Sales Church at Phoenicia.

Second Noah Is Ready to Sell Ark To Acquire Bus

Skipper Must Move, Says Olympia's Engineer, but Woe Unto Creaky Craft

By SIGRID ARNE

Olympia, Wash., April 21 (Wide World)—For 22 years now Olympia has led a peculiarly protected existence.

It has had a second "Noah"—Skipper William Greenwood—living right on the water front in a second "ark," waiting to save all the repentant sinners when the flood came.

Greenwood's ark is a slightly top-heavy Leviathan. It's 60 feet long, 22 foot beam, topped with two fancy decks which Skipper Greenwood fashioned lovingly in his spare time—and from strictly spare parts.

He planned to load up with sinners, float over the tops of Olympia's roofs, and come to an eventual safe anchorage somewhere in the peaks of the Cascade mountains.

But now the city engineer's office has gone practical on him. They say he must move, but there the too many complications:

It never has been out on its shakedown cruise. The prow only feels the lap of waves at high tide. And, as a matter of cold fact, Skipper Greenwood never did get around to assembling the engine. Then one day he traded it off for a suit of armor that caught his eye. He thought the iron suit would be good for the day he ran into the devil.

There are two other hitches to the ark's hauling up anchor. Greenwood never has had time to hook on the rudder and there's no steering wheel.

But Greenwood thinks that's just captious criticism. It's an ark, isn't it?

Skipper Greenwood is a spry man of 72. He lives alone, except for a sympathetic dog which quite understands when the skipper uses big safety pins to splice his suspenders. They are as much a part of Olympia's life as the Washington state capitol.

The dog is named spot. The breadman brought him. The day I visited Greenwood he seemed to acquire another dog. He went fumbling into his crowded and dimly lit cabin, and put his hand down, in the dark, on his second pooch. Mildly surprised, Greenwood said, "Well, where'd he come from?"

Greenwood was born in Coaltown, Rock Island county, Ill. He came to Washington as a child. His parents farmed, but he went into the lumber mills, and finally retired on an old age pension of $17.50 a month. That has been upped to $33—minus $7 because he pays no rent.

The fate of his ark is an extremely delicate matter for Olympia. The old man is an institution. So everyone is pretending that somehow the city will tow the ark to a new anchorage on Puget Sound.

But privately the city engineer confesses that he'll just have to touch a match to it.

The skipper pretends, too. He talks about the new anchorage, but he also slipped down to the local paper and inserted an advertisement offering the ark for sale. Price: $300.

He plans to use the $300 to buy a discarded school bus, and wait for the flood in that.

Stores Report Rush For Porch, Lawn Lines

If reports from the South, where spring arrives early, forecast what's to come in other sections of the country, then America is all set to buy more outdoor furniture within the next few weeks than in any comparable period in the nation's history.

As the sun swings northward, sales of gliders and chairs and umbrella sets and outdoor equipment of all kinds are swinging upward. Americans know that outdoor life is healthy, that they should let the sun's rays get in their invigorating works, especially these days when it is so necessary for workers to keep fit. And, being Americans, they want to be comfortable while they're about it—hence the demand for well-styled outdoor furniture.

Much furniture of this type is made of metal and, in this classification, the merchandise now on display in the stores is the last of its kind, until priorities give way to peace. Production of "metal household furniture" — meaning any furniture containing more than 5% of metal in the net weight of the finished product and applying to lawn and porch furniture as well as interior furniture, has been drastically curtailed.

The War Production Board's limitation order L-62, signed March 20, limits the output of all manufacturers during April and May and, effective May 31, production must halt entirely. The steel that once made gliders and settees hereafter will go into planes and tanks.

Furniture men emphasize that purchase of steel furniture (or any other merchandise already in finished form and on retail floors) does not hamper the war effort in any way. Dealers placed large orders for equipment of this type at the wholesale markets held last November and production was underway long before Pearl Harbor. Large stocks are on hand in stores throughout the country. For this reason, selling will continue in normal fashion this spring, but merchandise sold now can no longer be replaced.

Stocks of wrought iron furniture, popular for outdoor use, also are substantial, but it is estimated that this type of furniture will be off the market by the end of this year.

In rattan furniture the situation is much the same. No curtailment order has been issued by the government, but rattan used by U. S. manufacturers comes from the Dutch East Indies, now occupied by the Japanese. When present supplies are used up (and, fortunately, they are large) there won't be any more.

Home Defense

Auxiliary Course

Henry Ulrich, foreman of Weiner Hose No. 6, has requested that all members who are going to take the 10-hours instruction course for auxiliary firemen meet at the Central Fire Station Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Town of Ulster

A meeting of District 5, Town of Ulster, will be held tonight in class sewing and hospital supplies in the town garage at 7:30 o'clock. Miss May Lay, R. N., and Mrs. Henry N. Peters will be the instructors.

Wednesday evening at the same time the class in nutrition will be held. Mrs. Groves will be the instructor. Everyone is invited to both sessions.

Good Furniture Going Into Defense Homes

When "defense housing" hit the headlines it was generally supposed that the demand would be for inexpensive furniture, but manufacturers of more expensive grades have discovered that they have a market among defense workers, also.

Although employes of war industries usually arrive at their new jobs without much accumulated capital and are not paid high wages unless they are skilled craftsmen, they do have an assured, steady income and in many instances, two or three members of the same family are employed. The result is a total family income that justifies the purchase of well-made and well-styled furnishings.

Surveys prove that home-makers living in defense houses, like their sisters elsewhere, consider the future when purchasing furniture and prefer to select merchandise which will still be useful in larger homes later on.

Bar Association to Meet

The next meeting of the Ulster County Bar Association will take place Tuesday, April 28, and will be preceded by a dinner to be served at 6:30 o'clock at the Stuyvesant Hotel. Guest speaker for the occasion will be Samuel E. Aronowitz, former president of the Albany County Bar Association, who will discuss problems of the bar in wartime. Reservations for the dinner meeting should be made this week with Dorr E. Monroe, secretary of the association.

Named Town Clerk

Mrs. Annie F. Kieffer of the Neighborhood Road, town of Ulster, has been named to fill the unexpired term of her husband, David Kieffer, as town clerk of the town of Ulster. The town board at a special meeting Monday night named Mrs. Kieffer to fill the vacancy. Mr. Kieffer was re-elected to the office for a two-year term at the election last fall.

Fourth Lecture Scheduled

Lecture No. 4 of the Brush-Up course for nurses which is being sponsored by the Benedictine and Kingston Hospital Alumnae Association will be held, Thursday, April 23, from 3 to 5 p. m. in the laboratory building. At 3 p. m. Miss Marguerite Murphy, R.N., will speak on the new blood bank. At 4 p. m. Dr. Robert Moseley will lecture on new surgical treatment.

In cold weather and warm I have protected you. I have been a source of enjoyment to the whole family. Now that you are moving, sell me through the Want Ads.

Newspapers Take Crack at Releases

American Press Must Do Its Own Reporting, Too, Says Maine Publisher

New York, April 21 (AP)—To help the United Nations win the war American newspapers "must be left free to do their own reporting and their own thinking," Frank S. Hoy of the Lewiston (Maine) Sun and Journal declared today as the American Newspaper Publishers Association opened its 56th annual convention.

"We are not going to win this war by surrendering our rights," asserted the chairman of the ANPA's first session, "by deceiving the people; by refraining from constructive criticism; by pollyanna talk of victories won when we have actually lost; by withholding casualty lists; by making war seem easy when we know that it is going to require 'blood, sweat and tears.'"

In a speech prepared for the opening meeting—devoted to the problems of newspapers with a circulation of 50,000 or less (approximately 90 per cent of the newspapers in this country), Hoy said:

"The newspapers the telling the people the truth. * * * The people turn to the newspapers for the truth. It is our great responsibility to see that the public continues to get the truth."

Scoring what he termed "wasteful propaganda," he said "our newspaper offices are flooded with wasteful and silly publicity stories emanating from army and naval services, and from innumerable government bureaus. The waste of time, money and of materials is positively shocking to those of us who are being forced to save paper, to save labor and to reduce cost wherever possible."

"Some of these releases," he elaborated, "go to great length to tell us: 'That ping-pong is the most widely played game at the camps; that three times as much coffee is consumed by the United States Marines as by civilians * * *'"

Hoy said such 'silly" releases "are accomplishing little more than filling the waste baskets in all the daily newspaper offices of the country."

"The most intelligent use of newspaper space," he added, "can be made through paid advertising by the government prepared by the advertising agencies of this country that know how to do the job."

Ulsters Blast 3239 Series In 5-Man Rec Sweepstakes

Mullens Hit 2745 Triple in State Bowling Tourney

Dwight McEntee Leads Locals With 564 at Binghamton; Also in Single Event

The Mullens, representing Kingston in the first round of the New York State Bowling tournament at Binghamton, have come up with all the indications that they will be in the money as a result of its 2745 series.

Paced by Dwight McEntee, who rolled a 564 triple and Johnny Swint's 560, the Mullens collected games of 912, 894 and 939. Johnny "Red" Sangi helped out with 559.

In the doubled combine Larry Petersen, Jr., and McEntee hit 1149. Petersen rolled 586. Johnny Swint and Johnny Sangi in the doubles fell to 1124.

The singles found McEntee again showing the way for the Kingston delegation with 189, 225 and 220 for a 634 triple. Larry Petersen came in with 607, John Swint had 520 and "Red" Sangi slumped to 496.

Sinicks Capture Third

While the Mullens failed to get into the real top-flight running, the Ellenville Sinicks, whose bowlers are quite familiar to local fans, crashed in with a third place score of 2927. Emil Garbarino rolled 640 and Ozone Ury had 630.

Although the Sinicks' third place ranking is temporary, their mark is on the boards and may stand. Ellenville got off to a slow start, but then came through with good scores to mount up its series.

Sports Shorts

New York, April 21 (AP)—Bids for the 1942 National A.A.U. outdoor track meet were re-opened today with arrival of formal notice that Dallas had withdrawn its sponsorship.

Secretary-Treasurer Daniel J. Ferris said New York and Chicago were in the running for the meet, which probably will be held the last week-end in June.

Eugene, Ore., April 21 (AP)—The University of Oregon athletic board moved Freshman Coach John Warren to the head grid coaching job after he assured them he was navy-proof.

When Tex Oliver resigned to join the navy, the board elevated Assistant Vaughn Corley to the position. A week later Corley enlisted in the navy.

Warren also tried to enlist, he admitted, but was rejected because he was over weight.

Seattle, April 21 (AP)—Boyhood chinning contests are going to be an integral part of physical education training for University of Washington upper classmen.

Juniors and seniors, heretofore exempt from physical education, must pass quarterly medical and exercise examinations.

Those who fail must take a course in chinning, rope climbing and running and jumping.

Baldwin, Kas., April 21 (AP)—Little Baker University has racked up its 15th consecutive dual meet victory.

The Baker track and field squad won 11 first places as they downed Washburn College yesterday, 84 to 46.

Houston, Tex., April 21 (AP)—Freddie Wolcott, former Rice Institute athlete and holder of many hurdle records, has joined the navy.

The former Owl star will go to Annapolis as an ensign for training in the navy physical education program.

Seattle, April 21 (AP)—The abandonment of Poughkeepsie as the site for the national crew races drew protest today from Al Ulbrickson, coach of the University of Washington's defending champions.

"None of the reasons listed by the committee—tidal conditions, lack of navy patrol and expense—seem weighty enough to cause such a switch," declared the Husky mentor.

Lexington, Ky., April 21 (AP)—Col. E. R. Bradley arrived last night in his private railroad car from Florida, where he spent the winter.

He is expected to witness the windup of the race meeting at Keeneland this week. His Kentucky Derby candidate, Bless Me, may compete Thursday.

Miami, Fla., April 21 (AP)—Billy McWilliams made a hole-in-one after 20 years of trying, but the Miami golfer isn't very happy about it.

The ace didn't count, because McWilliams made it on his second drive from the same tee. He was practicing for a tournament at the time.

Augusta, Ga., April 21 (AP)—Wartime baseball along the lower Atlantic seaboard boomed last night as an estimated 11,500 fans turned out for three South Atlantic League season openers at Savannah, Ga., Greenville, S. C., and Jacksonville, Fla.

An earlier opener at Augusta, Ga., Sunday swelled total opening game attendance in the class "B" loop to 15,500.

Kitchen Mechanics

State College, Pa. (AP)—Gadget-fixing won't have to be done by future husbands of Pennsylvania State College co-eds. The girls are taking an evening course called "mechanics for the home front," learning to fix leaky spigots, repair electric light cords, clean motors, and replace fuses.

Local Keglers in Second Place in First Week of Bowling Event at Centrals

With Ralph Nardi blasting out a crushing 572 series Sunday night at the Central Recreation alleys, the Ulsters moved out and collected a sizzling 3239 series to gain second place in the Central Rec. 5-Man Sweepstakes.

Nardi polished the lanes for games of 203, 169 and 200. The Ulsters, who just barely missed going into first place, assembled scores of 1081, 1071 and 1087. The Ulsters dropped off in the final two frames of the last game and that meant second place instead of first.

However, the rampaging Ulsters, who were riding on a 230-pin handicap, came through with enough power to capture second. Following Nardi came Jake Senor who had 548. Sam Avnet hit 536.

Following the first week-end of Gil Sampson's 5-man Sweepstakes, the Lasher Five of Pawling, rests in first place with a torrid 3320 series. The Ulsters follow with 3239. Freds are in third with 3193, the Electrol Appentices in fourth with 3144 and the Crystals in fifth with 3141.

Individual leaders thus far are Phil Corrado, a local kegler who polished off a neat 244 single. Clifton Quick holds the high series with his 631.

The squad prize winners to date include Schwartz Five of Poughkeepsie, 1060; Beacon Dusters, 1036; Sangi Sparkplugs of Glasco, 1090; the Electrol Apprentices, Kingston, 1105; Telcos, 1080; Oilers, 1116; Ulster Co. Lodge, 1129; Lasher Five of Pawling, 1139, and the Ulsters, Kingston, 1087.

WOODSTOCK

Woodstock, April 21 — Albert Mayham of Grand Gorge has entered the employ of the Woodstock Press.

Mrs. Esther Mower, now living in Poughkeepsie, returned to her home in Woodstock for the week-end.

A large map, showing the outlines of the property, suggested for a sight of the new school building, when and if it is built, is being shown in the window of Happy & Co.

Mr. Castle of New York spent the week-end in Woodstock.

One of the largest funerals ever seen in Woodstock was that of Larry Elwyn at 2 p. m. on Sunday at the V. N. Lasher undertaker parlors. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. William P. Peckham of Kingston. Mr. Peckham read portions of scripture interspersed with poetic reflections, among them Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar." There was no music. Burial in the Woodstock Cemetery.

A decorative fence has been built on the property of Eugene Schleicher, at the point where it joins the main street.

NATIONAL WANT AD WEEK

State Republicans Revive Reapportionment Bill Once Defeated; Is Effective in 1944

Albany, N. Y., April 21 (AP)—The legislature's majority Republicans revived today a once-defeated congressional reapportionment bill by making the measure effective in 1944 instead of this year.

The G. O. P. members of both Senate and Assembly went into closed conference, interrupting the sessions of each house, while leaders sought sufficient support to pass the measure which lacked two votes of the necessary 26 in a senate test Friday.

Revival of the measure, revising almost every congressional district line fixed in 1911, was urged by several former opponents who expressed resentment at what they termed Republican state leaders' interference in the highly controversial subject.

Republican leaders asserted no attempt would be made to call for another vote on proposed redistricting of state legislative lines. The measure was defeated with the congressional bill by four votes.

Some Republican lawmakers explained privately they voted against the congressional measure because of a belief party leaders were trying to obtain passage of the bill to justify a year's work of a Republican-controlled reapportionment committee and expenditure of more than $175,000.

U. S. Firm to Open Arkansas Diamond Mines

Hot Springs, Ark., April 21 (AP)—The North American Diamond Corporation of Indianapolis will start immediately a $1,000,000 development program in the long-idle Arkansas diamond mines near her to obtain stones for war purposes.

Announcement of the proposed development program was made here by Governor Homer M. Adkins last night.

The corporation leased the diamond properties near Murfreesboro last summer.

Full scale operations have not been attempted since about 1920. Accurate figures on the production were never made public but a Smithsonian Institute report in 1923 said that 10,000 diamonds with a conservative value of $150,000 had been taken from the field.

The field was discovered in 1907.

Taft Considers G. O. P. Post-War Statement Mistake for Committee

the resolutions committee were executive, reporters gained the impression that one of the principal points of debate was Willkie's phrase "just and reasonable international responsibilities." Furthermore, the resolution as adopted by the national committee nowhere contained the world "isolationism," whereas Willkie had advocated a direct repudiation of isolationism.

"We realize," the final statement said, "that after this war the responsibility of the nation will not be circumscribed within the territorial limits of the United States; that our nation has an obligation to assist in the bringing about of an understanding, comity and cooperation among the nations of the world in order that our liberty may be preserved and that the blighting and destructive processes of war may not again be forced upon us and upon the free and peace loving peoples of the earth."

Of the national war effort, the committee said:

"We demand the prosecution of an offensive war, relentlessly and without reservation, whatever it may cost in wealth, energy and human life, until the United States and its allies have won a complete victory over their enemies."

The committee declared it would recognize only "peace with victory" and asserted "there shall be no appeasement or compromise."

The resolution pledged preservation of the two-party system, reserved the party's right to constructive criticism of the administration's war effort, asked that politics not influence war work appointments, that non-essential spending be cut drastically and non-essential domestic regulations be eliminated.

Eleanor Achenbach and Winard Redding are in charge of the posters. Betty Frost also is working with a committee of art students on posters. Doris Corwin and Mary Jenkins are in charge of the refreshments. Bill Holecek is head of the floor committee.

Origin of Superstition

Miss Claudia De Lys, authority on the subject of superstitious fears, gave the teachers' college audience a brief account of the history of certain common beliefs in the auditorium Tuesday morning.

Explaining that fear is the basis of all superstitions, Miss De Lys said that a sure way to rid oneself of a fear is to gain a knowledge of its cause and effect.

The speaker stressed the point that belief or faith in anything is the first step toward accomplishing it.

Superstitions explained

Miss De Lys then explained the origin of several of the more common superstitions prevalent today. Belief in the lucky symbol of the four-leaf clover had an ancient origin, and was associated with the cross. When a person throws a bit of spilled salt over his left shoulder he is really making an offering to the evil spirits.

In ancient times the word for right also meant "man," while left meant "woman," accounting for the difference in buttoning on men's and women's garments. Wearing a garment inside out for luck is really an attempt to effect a disguise from evil spirits.

The superstition against "three on a match" is of ancient origin when three fires signified a death, and the familiar "knocking on wood" is actually a prayer to the symbol of life embodied in the tree.

At the close of the hour Miss De Lys read a short selection which explained her philosophy of life.

Kerch is called Russia's Pompeii because of its wealth of tombs and relics.

Japanese Jitters Seem Growing, in View of Silence

the enemy doesn't learn how this coup was executed, the same plan can be used again. Then there is a further advantage of silence: It's a great breeder of war-nerves among the enemy. Indications are that a wide section of the Nipponese population is suffering from a new malady which we hope will become famous as Japanese jitters.

From the military standpoint this raid is likely to have the effect of tieing up warplanes and warships for home protection at a crucial moment when the Japs need this equipment for their various offensives.

What with this sensation, and General MacArthur's surprise raid on the Philippines the other day, it probably isn't strange that many of my readers have gone air-minded. All sorts of inquiries are rolling in, and not a few relate to the possibility of using Alaska as a base for bombing Japan.

One World War veteran in Duluth writes "it has been pretty well known by everybody here" that bombers were being flown northwestward over the city all through the winter, and he says it wasn't difficult to guess that they were headed for Alaskan bases. He therefore figured that Alaska must be getting ready for some hot work against Japan.

Well, of course I have no personal knowledge about warplanes over Duluth, but I see no reason to challenge the analysis of my correspondent if his facts are correct. He certainly is right in believing that Alaska is a base of growing importance. We have warplanes and other equipment there, and while it isn't permitted to discuss this in detail it is logical to assume that our striking power in Alaska will be increased rapidly.

We are safe in saying that when the time comes for a grand offensive against Japan, Alaska will play a big role. And that isn't telling the Japs anything they don't know already and undoubtedly are worried about, especially since Saturday's mystery raid.

Raleigh Says U. S. Vessel Bombed by Australian Forces

New York, April 21 (AP)—John Raleigh, CBS correspondent in a broadcast from Australia, said today that the United States destroyer Peary, acknowledged by the United States to have been sunk February 19 at Darwin when the Japanese scored five direct bomb hits, previously had been bombed by the Australians by mistake.

As she was nearing Darwin after successfully undergoing many bombings at Manila and in the Indies, Raleigh said, "Australian planes mistook the Peary for an enemy craft and bombed her, unfortunately, more accurately than the Japanese.

"Her fire control and fore masts were carried away by direct hits. The ship, though frantically signalling, did not fire back at the Allies, who honestly believed the vessel an enemy one.

"Finally, a bomb fell on the after-deck, setting afire the ammunition stacked beside four-inch guns. A seaman rushed to the danger spot and hurled the shell cases, afire, overboard. For this he was awarded the Navy Cross."

The Peary finally reached Darwin, short-handed because mosquitoes nesting in green camouflage used in the islands had infected 25 men with malaria. A new fire control apparatus was on its way when the Japanese attacked, Raleigh said.

FLINTKOTE PROTECTION

Seems too good to be true—but it can be done. How? By applying FLINTKOTE Insulated Brick Siding over the present weather-worn side walls. Figure it out for yourself:

1. Flintkote Insulated Brick Siding never requires paint. How much will that save you per year?
2. Your fuel bills may be reduced as much as 25%. What will that save?
3. Sparks that may fly against the siding will burn out harmlessly.
4. Re-sale or rental value of your house rises sharply.

Ask to see the handsome FLINTKOTE Insulated Brick Sidings that so closely resemble brick. No obligation.

* Re-siding costs vary with the individual house. Ask for free estimate.

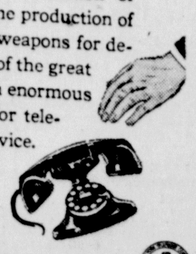
TANKS AND TELEPHONES

Two of the Nation's Vital Needs

TANKS, ranging from small, fast-moving ones to huge 60-ton land battle wagons, are a vital need of our army and allies. This year the program calls for some 45,000 to be built and 75,000 more next year.

This tremendous accomplishment has meant the complete transformation of scores of factories from the production of peace-time goods to war weapons for destruction. Like every one of the great war-time jobs, it brings an enormous increase in the demand for telephone equipment and service. And that is why we ask your cooperation in your own use of the telephone.



NEW YORK TELEPHONE COMPANY

Your Use of the Telephone in War Time

You can help us serve both you and the war effort if you will keep in mind these simple suggestions:

1. LOOK UP NUMBERS YOU'RE NOT SURE OF
Refer to your personal number list or the directory and call "Information" only when you can't find the number there.

2. ANSWER YOUR TELEPHONE PROMPTLY
Even seconds are important these days. However, when you make a call, give the other fellow enough time to reach his telephone before you hang up.

3. SPEAK CLEARLY AND DIRECTLY INTO THE MOUTHPIECE
Having to repeat yourself takes time, and ties up the lines needlessly. Talk in normal tones with the lips about ½ inch away from the mouthpiece.

4. HANG UP RECEIVER CAREFULLY
A book or other object under the receiver may put your telephone "out-of-service." Replacing the receiver carefully will insure your getting all incoming calls.
